Republican State Nominations.
GOVERNOR:
GEORGE W. DELAMATER, Crawford.
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR:
LOUIS A. WATKINS, Lackawanna.
SECRETARY OF INTERNAL AFFAIRS:
THOMAS J. STEWART, Montgomery.

On fact that is potent to all unprejudiced minds is that nearly all the Independent Republicans whose attitude in 1882 made possible the election of Pattison for Governor, are now full of enthusiasm for Delamater, Watkins and Stewart. This is as it should be, for it must be difficult for any man who has no personal interest in either candidate to discover why Delamater is not entitled to the full party vote.

His candidacy was announced long ago, and his canvass was openly conducted; quite as much so as that of any other candidate this year, or any year, and the result was that after a most spirited campaign Mr. Delamater secured a plurality of the delegates and was nominated by the Convention on the second ballot.

He is certainly entitled to the hearty support of the whole party, and we have no doubt that on the morning after election his majority will be found to be anywhere from 40,000 to 80,000 votes.

EVERY EVENING, Bristol's Democratic daily, naturally seizes with avidity and publishes with glee statements which it considers detrimental to the interests of the Republican party. In line with the course it has chosen, and in common with other Democratic journals, it hailed with joy the absurd announcement of a depleted United States Treasury, and had a beautiful time in scoring, to its limited ability, the present administration. A little more modest than some of its contemporaries it creates a deficit of only from $75,000,000 to $125,000,000, while some of its more vigorous coadjutors have succeeded in piling it up as high as $150,000,000. As a matter of fact, as is announced from Washington, and with the figures furnished to testify to the correctness of the figures, the appropriation bills should become law at the amount now fixed, there would still be a surplus of $38,000,000, to say nothing of $134,000,000 now in the Treasury.

If the Intelligencer thinks that the political course which it is pursuing at present is consistent with Republican principles, the editor of the mug-wump journal must sooner or later discover his folly, greatly to his sorrow. Mr. George W. Delamater, of Crawford county, will be elected Governor of Pennsylvania next November, no matter whether the Intelligencer says so or not. Considering the fact that the above-mentioned paper has always demanded and always secured the party patronage to the total exclusion of every loyal Republican paper in the county, the question grows more important daily: Can the rank and file of the party stand by a journal that is using every means in its power to defeat the party's nominations?—Langhorne Standard.

Is the McKinley bill a good measure for the United States and a bad measure for England? The answer is to be found in the mass meeting at Sheffield, where 12,000 persons assembled and passed a resolution calling upon the government to take protective measures against the McKinley Tariff bill, which, it was stated, threatened to become the means of destroying Sheffield's trade with America. Straws show how the winds blow.

SURELY nobody except those who are in favor of minority misrule by unlimited debate can object to the proposed rule for fixing a time when the Senate shall vote on measures which the majority desire to enact. It is a most patient and reasonable code of procedure, and shows that the Senate Republicans are patriotic and broad-minded. It is better than their opponents deserve, but the country deserves the best of everything.

REPUBLICAN victory in Pennsylvania is fairly assured, but nothing should be taken for granted. Thorough organization and a determination to get out the full party vote are the best guarantees of success at the polls.

The Ohio Republican Convention nominated Daniel J. Ryan for Secretary of State and Thaddeus A. Minshall for Judge of the Supreme Court. Frank J. McCulloch was nominated for member of the Board of Public Works.

PRESIDENT HARRISON has appointed A. B. Nettleton, of Minnesota, to be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and James R. Foley, of Massachusetts, to be Assistant Secretary of the Navy. Both are new officials.

MARK Twain's eldest daughter will enter Bryn Mawr College this fall.

GLEANNING.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward McAllister will help maintain the tone of Hickfield Springs.

A Boston woman, who invented a shoe sewing machine, sold the patent for $150,000.

Mrs. Morris of Sheboygan, Wis., has in her possession a meerschaum pipe that belonged to a king of Denmark 238 years ago.

Edith Kilduff, of Belfast, Me., has written President Harrison's last message, containing ten thousand words, on a postal card.

The people of Trenton, N. J., propose to build a monument to the late Secretary Frelinghuysen, whose home was in that city.

George Hugo, grandson of Victor Hugo, was married recently out of $15,000, the basis of the transaction being a played out stone quarry.

A Driving Park is to be established at Dulington. A track will be laid out in accordance with the rules and regulations of the National Trotting Association.

The great Percheron horse farm of Mark W. Dunham, near Aurora, Ill. Mr. Dunham started by importing twenty horses in 1873. Since that time his annual importations have reached 400, and he has become a millionaire several times over.

Temperance advocates will be shocked to hear the record of a Russian centenarian, who has just died at Perm at the respectable age of 105. Since he was 18 years old he had gone to bed drunk every night.

He had only been ill one day in his life, when he fell asleep in the street during a fit of intoxication and his nose and ears were frozen.

The greatest sleeper-chamber in England is William Green. He has repaired fifty or more sleepers and is sent for from all parts of the Kingdom. His great achievements were in repairing the spire of Salisbury Cathedral, 494 feet high; Graham, 320 feet; and a steeple in Cambridgeshire, 280 feet. He has also built or repaired over 500 chimney-stacks, the highest being 320 feet.

Miss Agnes Harris, 17 years old, of Pittsburg, sued out a warrant against Harry Davis on a charge of carnage. In her affidavit she states that Davis caught her in his arms on the street and rubbed her chin and cheeks with his stubby, soft beard. Her face pinked for some days, and then some were developed, and a physician had to be called in. Davis refused to pay the doctor's bill, but later promised to do so.

Lillian Rivers, a young woman who created sensation a year ago by escaping from the Bethany College at Topka, Kan., is courting fame again by having a diamond set conspicuously in one of her front teeth. She recently made her appearance on the streets of Philadelphia displaying this innovation, and the effect when she smiled was said to be startling. Having once seen it you could well say: "Her bright smile haunts me still."

Now that the bill of the West Virginia appropriation bills should become law at the amount now fixed, there would still be a surplus of $38,000,000, to say nothing of $134,000,000 now in the Treasury.

A LIO STRIKE IN TRENTON.—Over 500 men of the New Jersey Steel and Iron Mills, threw down their tools last Monday morning and refused to go to work until the firm had signed the scale of wages fixed by the Amalgamated Iron Workers' Association at their last convention, guaranteeing the present wages for one year. The mills are owned by Ex Mayor Hewitt, of New York, who is at present in Europe. Mr. Edward Cooper left for Europe Sunday with a copy of what the men wanted. He has gone to interview Mr. Hewitt, as no other has the power to treat with the men. About 2,000 hands are employed in the mill, and they will be called out if the scale is not signed.

W. E. Baker, the late sewing-machine millionaire, had curious conceits in regard to the arrangement of his private grounds. His place at Wellesley, Mass., in the matter of the grounds, particularly, is a curiosity. Everywhere on the premises the visitor is confronted with some ingenious piece of extravagance. Here in the pathway is a concealed platform which, as you step upon it, swings and sends you a lurching; there is an inviting chair in front of a flowering cactus, and when you take a seat to inspect the cactus the plank sinks out of sight and its place springs up a wooden devil, painted red, and grinning in your face. There are dozens of grotesqueries of the kind which suggest the mechanism of a Humpty Dumpty rather than the arrangement of a gentleman's private lawn.

General John C. Fremont died at his home West Twenty-fifth street New York, on Sunday afternoon. The immediate cause of his death was peritonitis, and it is thought that his demise was hastened by a visit which he made to a cemetery last Tuesday, to put flowers on the grave of a child in obedience to a promise made to a friend. The intense heat combined with the exertion seemed to affect him unfavorably, and on Thursday he was so ill that he called in a physician, who made an examination, and forecasting a fatal termination, telegraphed to his family. He did not resist his danger, and a few hours before he died, said to his physician: "Yesterday and the day before were bad days, but to-day I feel better and I am going to work. I am preparing an article for a magazine and have all the material ready that I have now only to write it out." When this was finished he said he should "go home," meaning to Los Angeles, where his wife and daughters are. He did not guess how near his last home he was.

DODGING A SLAVE CHASER.

Excitement in Getting Away Under Fire with a Load of Slaves.

Very soon the beach seemed to swarm with moving objects which we could not yet distinguish. A number of long, black objects left the shore, and when through the breakers they stopped, the small craft outside. Now we could not see that the negroes were being transferred to the boats outside the breakers from canoes which ran through them, with from four to six in each. As the sloops were filled they pulled for the ship, and the launch having been arranged, the negroes were soon coming over the ship's side. As each one reached the deck he was given a biscuit and sent below. It seemed slow work at first, but as the canoes were soon all hauled and rushing through the surf it presented a busy scene. The sloops were now flying to and from us, and a great number of negroes were already on board at 2 p. m.

The lookout at the masthead shouted, "Sail, ho! away to the southward." From the deck we could see nothing. A danger signal was hoisted at once to hurry all aboard. In a short while we could see from the deck a little black spot. Smoke! A cruiser! Another signal, a blood red flag was hoisted informing those ashore of the kind of danger. If possible the ship was to be saved, but our own men were lowered and they hid mutually. The approaching vessel added size and the volume of smoke increased. She could now be seen, and was recognized as the Vixen with the naked eye.

Between 30 and 40 years of age, on these the greater part turn their backs on the world in consequence of disappointed love. For suicides of all ages July is the favorite month. During the period of six years from 1883 to 1888 inclusive the number of suicides in the month of July ranged from 500 to 800, while the number during the remainder of the year averaged from 200 to 300 only. A characteristic of Japanese suicides occurred at the famous shrines at Nikko. An old lady of 60 went thither in August. Her circumstances were good; she had two sons in official positions and her home in Tokio was comfortable and happy. She spent two days at Nikko visiting the various temples and places of note, and seemed bright and contented. But at daylight on the third morning she was found with her throat cut before a little shrine at the back of the Temple of Isewada. From her pocket the police took a paper wherein was set forth, briefly but plainly, the motive of her suicide. It was very simple. She had loved Nikko and wished to die among its sacred groves. At her age the probability of being able to return there appeared remote. Therefore she availed herself of the present opportunity, and with kind farewells to those left behind made her exit.—Public Opinion.

The Pride of His Class.
He was a bright, handsome boy of sixteen, sunny tempered, brilliant and engaging, the delight of his parents, the joy of his home, and the pride of his class. But a shadow fell across his bright prospects. It began with a trifling cough; soon came premonitions of consumption, his strength failed, his cheeks grew hollow, and he seemed doomed to die. His mother, a devoted and loving mother, tried every remedy, but in vain. His father, a man of great energy and business, tried to keep him at school, but he was too weak. He died at the age of sixteen, leaving behind him a wife and three children. His death was a great loss to his family, and his friends were grieved to see him go. He was a true friend to all who knew him, and his death was a great loss to the world.

A Bottle of the Rebellious.
There is a little steambot on Green river, running between Livermore and Calhoun, that is little more than an exaggerated canoe, supplied with boiler, engine and a paddle wheel. It is the Alpha, and it is engineered by a man who has had a great deal to do with the filling in of history, the outlines being furnished by others, his superiors in position, but not necessarily in ability. He was the first assistant secretary of war of the Confederate States of America. After this he was chief military engineer of railways under the Confederate government, a position that required a high degree of ability, ingenuity of resources and an almost incredible degree of determination and perseverance.

Under his direction things were accomplished in the way of building, repairing and operating railroads that made the northern engineers stare with wonder when they saw the nature and quantity of the material with which the work was done and the conditions under which it was accomplished. After the war Mr. Miner made a great deal of money in southern railroads, but he went to California and lost his money. He is now more than 70 years old, and is at work on the little boat trying to eke out a livelihood by hand and honest toil.—Owensboro, Ky., Messenger.

Here is an excellent method for utilizing the delicious marrow that lies among the fibers of the pea pod, and which is sweeter and better than the peas themselves, which, when the best are used, are not so good. The first of all vegetables for fine flavor, tenderness, succulence and nutritiousness. Save for use all the tender sweet pulp of the pea pod which prevents their use with the seeds in most soups. The shells are well in water, to which has been added a little carbonate of soda; then strain through a cloth, and after adding some sugar to the liquid, boil it down till thick. The extract thus obtained will keep for any length of time without becoming moldy, and a teaspoonful of it added to a bowl of soup gives it the flavor of fresh green peas, besides adding to its material quality.—New York Press.

Smuggling by Mail.
Most of the smuggling by mail is done in parcels. When these are sealed we always suspect something dubious within. The most remarkable thing seems to be the small compass into which the mail smugglers can get goods. A silk dress goes into a parcel that you would not think could contain a waist.
